How Stock Exchanges Are Experimenting With Blockchain Technology - June 12, 2017, 08:50:48 AM EDT By Prableen Bajpai

"Today, some of the most prominent stock exchanges are looking at ways to leverage the distributed ledger technology (DLT) in order to fundamentally overhaul traditional mechanisms. The functioning of stock exchanges involves complex procedures that can be time consuming, cost inefficient, cumbersome, and prone to risks. The multi-layered processes—pre-trade, trade, post-trade and custody, and securities servicing—is extraordinarily complex. This makes a case for experimentation with blockchain, thanks to its potential ability to streamline the process."

Putin Meets With Ethereum Founder To Create National Virtual Currency - by Tyler Durden Jun 12, 2017 11:00 PM

{Speaking at the Economic Forum, Putin said that "the digital economy isn't a separate industry, it's essentially the foundation for creating brand new business model" and discussed means to boost growth long-term after Russia ended its worst recession in two decades. As explained repeatedly over the past 6 months, besides being a method of exchange, Ethereum is also a ledger for everything from currency contracts to property rights, speeding up business by cutting out intermediaries such as public notaries."
